Background

ONE

PersonalDecision-Making

We all encounter moments that require decision-making, and too much or too little information can interfere with the decision-making process, creating stress and anxiety.

Psychological needs in a high-pressure era

Increased social pressures lead to heightened demand for emotional comfort. Future uncertainties fuel career anxieties, emotional confusion, and rising loneliness.

We need a gentle ritual to receive some guidance.

Society/Culture

For Chinese culture: In a technologically advanced society, we explore ways to integrate traditional culture with technology to achieve the preservation, inheritance, and improved application of culture (and to some extent, make technology more acceptable to specific cultural groups).

In 2022, China's fortune-telling industry exceeded 30 billion yuan in scale.

The most popular methods among young people: Tarot readings, mini-program fortune-drawing apps, and videos by prominent metaphysics bloggers on major platforms. Traditional practices like Liu Ren, Bagua, and Zi Wei Dou Shu still maintain dedicated followings.

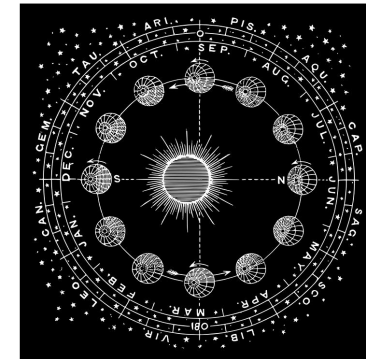

For world cultures:

Similar divination traditions exist across world cultures.

Though differing in form, divination is also widespread in British culture: Tarot, Astrology, Runes, Mediumship, Palmistry

Gen Zers are particularly fond of tarot, astrology, and metaphysics-related apps.

Value

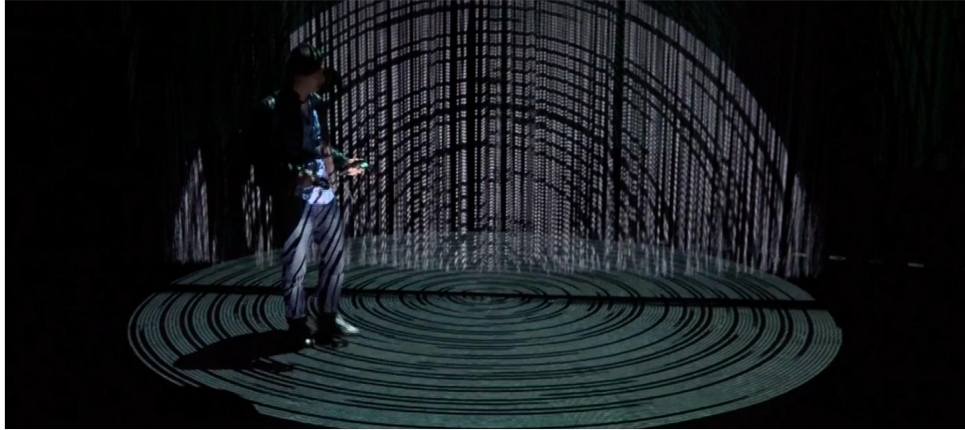

Users from diverse cultural backgrounds can learn about Chinese culture through the experience and are encouraged to reinterpret their own culture, exploring the similarities and differences in how different cultures view the same events.

Technology/Ethics

The calm and objective nature of machines is leading them to replace humans as decision-makers. From a diversity perspective, we want to create an unconventional robot that assists people in decision-making in a warm and meaningful way.

Auraflow is a system built on traditional culture (not a black-box algorithm), with interpretable mapping rules that are easier for users to understand and allow them to retain autonomy.

Solution

Decision-making Support

- Interpersonal support and professional consultation are more in-depth. The app has structured analysis.
- Consultation costs are high and lack immediacy. The app lacks a sense of ritual or cultural resonance.

BIY™ — 《Believe it Yourself》

- The design is highly ritualistic, transforming the act itself into a ceremony rather than mere information input and output. It gives the audience a sense that “this is an important moment,” triggering psychological cues and self-association.
- It doesn't give you the answer; instead, it guides you to find your own answer through the ritual.
- BIY largely borrows symbols rather than deeply constructing a complete divination system, lacking genuine cultural underpinnings.

A series of faith-based fictional computing kits for crafting and transforming everyday logic and superstition.

Adhering to the principle of not making decisions for participants, we aim to enhance cultural depth.

- Highly contagious, with results that can be shared via screenshots to achieve an effect akin to automatic viral spread.
- With instant gratification and minimal barriers to entry, users simply input a phrase to receive their “destiny”—making participation straightforward.
- The fusion of AI and fortune-telling has become a cultural sensation among contemporary youth, capitalizing on the trend of “cyber mysticism.” It taps into young people's skeptical yet curious nature.
- Humans require tangible entities to anchor mystical experiences. AI fortune-telling relies solely on text, lacking symbolic objects. This results in low trust among users and weak emotional engagement.
